12:42 Mon 9 Nov
4G 84%
Blank 17

In my professional opinion, from an arboricultural perspective, the oak tree is recommended for removal due to the presence of significant cavities and defects within the main stem. These features may be indicative of internal decay and potential structural deterioration, which could adversely affect the tree's structural integrity and overall stability. Consequently, removal is considered the appropriate course of action to mitigate potential risks.

Kind regards

[redacted]