[redacted]

From: physics woman [redacted]
Sent: 31 July 2025 11:30
To: Trees
Subject: Re: Further information requested on planning application DC/25/1175

[redacted] [redacted]

[redacted] reasons for not wanting to replant would be:
1. We would not look to plant another ash tree due to the problems with ash die back
2. We have planted a small apple tree very nearby and so feel like we have 'given back' to the environment in a more manageable way.
3. Several laurel trees will be planted close to where the tree is situated, to provide a more natural boundary protection between our garden and the adjoining New Place allotments.
4. Not replanting a tree of this potential magnitude would ensure that the area is safer for pedestrians and neighbouring houses. This corner of the garden catches the wind and could be unsafe.
5. Removing the tree and not replanting would not effect the cosmetic landscape in a negative way due to the density of trees around it.

Regards,
Emma Castle

[redacted]