Comments:	Dear Planning officer, I submitted an objection on the 1st of July but it appears to have not been recorded on your system. For the sake of good order I will repeat my objection to this application and it is as follows The site has had declining use in the period since the yurts were first erected in that field and the yurts have now deteriorated to the extent that they appear to be virtually derelict. They currently represent a complete eyesore in what had previously been, prior to their erection, an attractive pasture. The canvas cladding on the yurts has become extremely shabby and discoloured and the roof of one of the yurts has collapsed as a result of its general deterioration and neglect.

I drive past the field where they are situated every day and unsurprisingly, given the current deteriorated condition of the yurts, I have seen very little evidence of their use for the original intended purpose for at least nine months. With that in mind the suggested need to extend the amenity cabin is clearly spurious. In any event the amenity cabin was never meant to be a permanent structure.

The application has all the appearances of an attempt to circumscribe the original planning agreement by unnecessarily introducing a much larger building presumably presumably as a footprint for further development in the future, as opposed to servicing any genuine current need.

Yours sincerely
