

Welcome to Bramber Brooks

Spanning over 40 acres, Bramber Brooks is rich not in history and wildlife. Take your time to enjoy the peace and tranquility of the site which is bustling with insects, birds and mammals.

The grassy meadows provide a home for insects and an occasional number of species. The mix of tall reeds offer shelter for a range of butterflies. Insects and reeds provide vital natural corridors for birds, while the nearby trees for both resident and migrant birds.

Bullfinches and Coots, Waders are found in the meadows, Bullfinches and Coots are also seen in the reeds. Both are also found in the reeds. The whole area is a haven for small mammals.

Reeds are home to bats which are also found in the reeds.

Reeds are also home to water voles and are also home to water voles.

For your own safety and to protect the wildlife, please keep dogs out of the reeds and avoid walking on the designated paths and walkways.
