Reasons for comment:	- Design
Comments:	I am firmly of the opinion that this development would improve the run-down nature of the current building. I do, however think more imagination is needed in creating a lovely building that will enhance the first impression people have when leaving the station. I know embellishments cost money but let's employ an imaginative architect who can pick up on several opportunities to be creative. The art deco station/the listed 16c houses opposite or the victorian terrace next to it. Failing that, how about something very modern that get's people talking? Let's not settle for the mediocre. Horsham is doing really well. The retail side is good, entertainment is good, the people are welcoming and friendly. Don't let the people down for the sake of a few pence.

Kind regards
