Comments:	Morth Gardens has been a big part of my sons life. [redacted] when he was younger he used to call it the Mario alley or the magical alley as we used to pretend to be Mario and luigi and his other favourite heroes such as sonic or spiderman. For me personally North Gardens holds alot of sentimental value also as so many memories have been created there with my son who lives in Coventry and still to this day asks to ride his bike through morth gardens. It's also an part of Horsham just like the bandstand or the mill. It's easy access to drill hall, the music studios, the cemetery, church and the samaritans to name a few in my opinion should be enough to keep it as it is. When walking with heavy bags it's convenience is unparalleled if you want to avoid lots of people dodging. The locals and the people that Morth gardens serve as a convenient cut through and a scenic part of our lovely town me and my son would really appreciate it staying as it is. Thank you so much for your consideration. Many thanks.

Kind regards
