Comments:	I write to support Mr and Mrs Bells' application for their temporary residency application. Mr and Mrs Bell provide their animals with the best life possible, ensuring they are well cared for, kept safe from different types of weather, and nurtured with food and water. They treat every animal with love, care and respect, providing what the animal needs whether that be a chicken that has come from a commercial chicken farm who will need peace, quiet and nurturing to grow new feathers and adjust to being outside, or ducklings hatched at the farm who need support as they start to mix with the other older ducks. As they provide such care Mr and Mrs Bells' working day at their farm often starts at 6am and finishes well past 9pm. This is particularly the case when they have new lives born at the farm or have poorly animals too, they do not leave their side! Why would anyone consider it right to leave a sick animal alone all night and not know what state it and the other animals would be in the next morning?

Mr and Mrs Bell have always done their best to provide their animals with the best love, care and attention possible and this is reflected in the products that they produce. I have previously bought sausages, meat and eggs from them and these were the tastiest items I have ever eaten. Whilst how an animal grows and develops is affected by its dna the care and attention shown by its owners is definitely reflected in the taste and quality of the final product.

For them to reside at their farm for all the reasons listed above and for many more would be a massive benefit for them - but more importantly for their animals too.
