

See photo of the sycamore below. To add a little more context, it's a lapsed pollard, the diameter of the new growth is equalling to that of the parent branches. As you can see the tree is close to the barn and there is some element of risk here.

