I would like to challenge Paul Hobbs' recommendation there be a condition that the windows and doors must remain closed during gym sessions.

Unless Mr Snowsell invests in expensive air conditioning with its subsequent ecological impacts, it will be unbearable to exercise in warm weather as it will become unbearably hot.

The noise levels, even with the doors and windows open, will unlikely affect any neighbouring residences as the distances are sufficiently distant in my opinion. I cannot see that any modest amounts of noise would have an adverse impact on any of the local businesses in nearby units - indeed, I have noticed that many businesses such as car repair shops which generate significant noise do not appear to have such conditions placed on them.

Please reconsider removing this condition as it will adversely affect those exercising and not lead to any community harm.

Kind regards,
