Families with neurodiverse children deal with loads of different appointments - hospitals, CAMHS, GPs, schools and more. Having somewhere that can be flexible with times is a big help. For a lot of families, early appointments aren't a problem at all and can actually make things easier.

The location is also a positive. A quiet, home-based setting is usually much better for neurodiverse children than a busy or clinical place.

I've also visited the property many times myself, usually for injuries, and I've used the lane a lot. I've never had any issues getting in or out, or passing other people on the lane.

Kind regards
